Video Shared with Police

Document and Time Stamp Events

Security cameras can record site activities on a local NVR, which can be very valuable, especially when fighting costly liability claims.

Our analysts can save you time by studying footage and data to respond to investigation requests more efficiently.

When unusual activity is detected, either during monitoring hours or non-monitoring hours, our team prepares an edited video outlining the activity and sends it to the client with a written summary.

Analysts pull raw footage from multiple cameras on a site, then analyze and edit it into a condensed clip.

Video reports can be shared with police, as well as the customer, who can use the evidence to help prosecute arrested criminals.

Common uses include employee theft, verifying deliveries, and providing video evidence to defend against fraudulent personal injury claims, unlocked gates and last-to-leave reviews.
